

Fort Utah (sometimes called Fort Provo) as portrayed by early Provo artist Samuel Jepperson from descriptions by pioneer settlers. The Fort was begun south of Timpanogos (Provo) River April 3, 1849, two days after settlers arrived from Salt Lake Valley. Note bastion in center where a cannon was mounted for protection in case the Indians became troublesome. The fort generally was believed to be located in the vicinity of the present Geneva Road, south of the river.
